Os promotores do NMP-REG, um projeto europeu que tem por base a cooperação inter-regional entre parceiros de diversos países, estiveram ontem reunidos no INL – Laboratório Ibérico Internacional de Nanotecnologia para debater o plano de ação regional tendo em vista a adoção de nanotecnologias, novos materiais e processos de produção pela indústria do norte de Portugal.

A margem do encontro, Pedro Moia, gestor do projeto, explicou que o NMP-REG – apoiado pelo Programa de Cooperação Territorial Europeia Interreg Europe – engloba sete parceiros de cinco países – Portugal (INL e CCDR-N), Itália, Bélgica, Alemanha e Roménia – que desenvolveram um conjunto de atividades de troca de aprendizagens e de experiências para «saber como é que nos seus territórios não-de facilitar este processo de transferência de conhecimento mais baseado nas políticas públicas de desenvolvimento regional nos instrumentos de financiamento que suportam essas políticas públicas». Neste momento, decorre a última etapa da primeira fase do projeto, pelo que no encontro de ontem foram apresentadas as atividades desenvolvidas com os parceiros e algumas ações preliminares para implementar na região tendo em vista a melhoria dos instrumentos de política pública.

"Stakeholders" regionais estiveram reunidos no INL.

Sobre o grupo de "stakeholders" da região Norte, Pedro Moia explica que o objetivo é que «neles estejam representadas entidades de sistemas científico e tecnológico, como universidades e centros de transferência de conhecimento, mas também representantes de empresas». «A lógica é ir mantendo essas entidades informadas do desenvolvimento do projeto e que elas vão alimentando o projeto com o seu "know-how", referiu o responsável, fazendo um balanço positivo do trabalho desenvolvido.

«Este tipo de projetos são mecanismos muito relevantes de aprendizagem porque vamos contactando com entidades que têm o mesmo tipo de problemas mas nos nossos contextos e aprendemos como eles abordam esses problemas nesses territórios, boas práticas que eles desenvolvem nos seus espaços. Tentamos perceber até que ponto também podemos adotá-las, e acho que a própria União Europeia procura fomentar este tipo de trocas de experiências entre diferentes estados membros porque é assim também que se vai construindo a identidade europeia», sustentou.

Depois desta primeira fase arranca a segunda e última, que se prolongará até 2021. Nesta etapa será monitorizada a implementação das ações e introduzidas «melhorias na forma como trabalhamos tendo em vista este desafio que esteve na génese do projeto».
