

Medtech4 Europe successfully presented to regional authorities from Baden-Württemberg and the Grand-Est region

On 4 April 2019, the Steinbeis-Europa-Zentrum took part in a Franco-German seminar in Kehl, Baden-Württemberg, on the topic "How can European projects be financed"? The seminar was organised by the Euro-Institute and was primarily aimed at employees of German municipal and state administrations as well as employees of associations. The 26 participants from the Region Grand Est and Baden-Württemberg were able to find out which funding programmes fit in with their project ideas and ask further questions.

Robert Gohla and Isabel Trömel were invited as podium speakers and presented the Medtech4 Europe project. Following the panel discussion, the following questions were discussed interactively with the participants in the form of a World Café: Why did you choose this project? What have you already learned from the project? How can we as administration and municipalities contribute to the success of the project?

Thanks to the participation, the Steinbeis-Europa-Zentrum was able to win new stakeholders (Cancéropôle Est, Hôpital de Hautepierre) for the project.
