Project-based learning for young adults (PUM-O+) is an active employment policy program for the empowerment of young adults, whose main learning method is project work. The fundamental purpose of the program is to develop sources of strength for integration into the labor market or education, development of professional identity and successful social integration.

Empowerment of young migrants in Postojna, Slovenia

The content of the program follows the interests of young people, as we want to provide them with content that is useful to them in their everyday life, and at the same time is necessary for a successful appearance on the labor market.

Meet our scientific advisory partner:
Leibniz Institute for Regional Geography (DE)

The Leibniz Institute for Regional Geography (IfL) is the only non-university research institute for geography in Germany. As a member of the Leibniz Association and as, the institute brings together basic research and knowledge transfer. Our tasks include visualising social change and preparing information about sustainable and regionally balanced development concepts.

With its approximately 115 staff members, the institute conducts research on current spatial developments in Germany and Europe. The MILEstone team is part of the research group "Mobilities and Migration".

As advisory partner of MILEstone, IfL supports the interregional policy learning and provide its expertise as research institute to all partners. We take a commanding role in the research, identification and assessment of good practices, help to monitor the implementation and outcomes of the project's peer reviews and give advice to the partners how to improve their addressed policies based on the identified good practices.

Local stakeholder groups

This autumn, stakeholder groups are created in each partner territory. Please check our website for impressions of the events (Postojna/SI, Naumburg/DE). If you are a stakeholder in the labour market integration of non-EU nationals and you would like to become engaged, please contact your local project partner for details.
